The world of IoT / M2M: how to keep an eye on the competition Every IoT/M2M market leader has a vision of how to bring big data and machine learning to the masses, and the first thing they do is to cut costs wherever possible. So if you're a market leader, how do you protect yourself against doppelgängers (or competitors)? There are a few ways to counteract the threat of competitors you know will be coming. Keep an eye on your competitors (and your clients) Your competitors will always be on the lookout for new tech that can fit with their business model. So how do you know if your clients are looking at their alternatives or looking to you for advice? Track all communication, call centers, partners, webinars and meetings. Look for new account announcements. Keep an eye out for changes in client policies such as a new approach to pricing, deadlines and the like. Plan to accommodate change It's essential to learn to accommodate change. In other words, prepare for IoT/M2M customers to move away from your service and products. Carefully manage client relationships. Handle all of the calls, meetings, and other interactions your team has to manage when your clients move. Have the vision Last, but not least: have the vision to prepare. If you don't have a vision for where you want your product to be in two years, then you're asking for trouble. So, how to protect yourself? As with a human business, you should take good care of your customers. First and foremost, you need to take good care of your customers. This applies to your big data, analytics, machine learning and IoT solutions. Second, get a reading of your competition. Learn to spot doppelgängers, competitors, or other companies that look and behave like your potential competition. Monitor your competitors: Track their activity. Create a plan of their business. Conduct
