I have been using the same code on my local machine with no issues and I am not sure what the issue is. The code is not the most complex, but I have been trying to debug and I don't understand the problem. The error occurs in the following line: temp.value = $(this).children('input[type=radio]:checked').val() I have tried many different variations of the code. Any help would be appreciated. My error: Uncaught SyntaxError: Unexpected identifier If I have to I can post the entire thing 1d6a3396d6

If someone on the new version installed the app on their device, and syncs the data to the iCloud, how are the users of the old version going to have access to the old data? Will it still have the old plist structure and sync the new data back to the iCloud? The old plist will be read-only but the new data can be edited. Edit: If I do have the old version of the app on a device, will it sync the data? A: You have two ways to save data in the Cloud. The first one is setting the plist file to be backed up to iCloud. Another one is setting the data manually in the plist file. What you need is set both of them. From the documentation, you can see the difference between them The following describes how to add, update, or delete plist files to be backed up to the iCloud. This information is used by iTunes when a user synchronizes an iPhone, iPod touch, or iPad with iTunes. Adding a Plist File to be Backed Up to the iCloud You can add a plist file to be backed up to the iCloud by creating the file in a special directory. After the file is created, it is copied into the application's documents directory, which is located in the user's home directory. I think that this is what you need. Apple has developed a tool to manage the Cloud Data. Q: Get
