A candidate for governor in Maine is leading the Democratic field in his own home state in a new poll. Democrat Lucy Locke has a 21 point lead over Republican Charlie Webster, according to a new WBUR poll conducted for WBUR by the University of New Hampshire Survey Center. The poll shows that 50 percent of New Hampshire voters would vote for Locke, and only 39 percent would choose Webster. The poll did not include Libertarian candidate Gary Johnson. "I think it's really just expressing the dissatisfaction and exasperation voters feel about the direction of the state," Becky Gardner, Locke's campaign manager, said. "New Hampshire is in trouble. It's got a $1.6 billion budget deficit, and the highest average property tax in the nation, and a $7,000 tax hike." New Hampshire is one of the whitest states in the country, with 91 percent of the population identifying as white and 3 percent identifying as Native American. "We are a state that is politically of the Northeast and of the West. There are many, many people that feel that New Hampshire is an oasis in a world dominated by political correctness," Bruce McDonald, an economist at Colby College, said in an interview. "It's a place where we have a very strong sense of tradition, which seems almost quaint in many ways compared to how politics has been for the last decade or so." The WBUR poll was conducted Oct. 18 through 20. The margin of error was plus or minus 4.9 percentage points.Uram Hill Uram Hill is a hill situated in Thane, Maharashtra, India. Its trail is marked by many stone steps and iron railings. History According to a legend, Uram Hill was founded by Saint-Germain Uram, who was a friend and disciple of Jesus Christ. Saint Germain was a Christian hermit and priest, who first travelled to India, and built a number of churches and schools. In his youth he had travelled to Egypt and was awarded a degree in Theology by the Roman Catholic church. Uram Hill is located in the Raigad-Bharuch region of Maharashtra. According to local people, Saint Germain passed the hill in his travels to Tihare. Uram Hill derives its name from Saint-Germain Uram. Saint-

Making Sense of Autism Articles If your child has just been diagnosed with an Autism spectrum disorder, then you may feel a little overwhelmed by all the 'new' information you're trying to absorb. It's natural to feel confused and stressed. The first thing to do, is to pull back and take a deep breath. One of the most common reactions in the early stages of diagnosis is for parents to feel upset or to become tearful. This is normal, but try not to bottle up your emotions. Telling your child that you are feeling upset, or trying to understand the diagnosis, is more likely to make them feel anxious than settle them. There are lots of things to get used to and to work out, and no-one expects you to have the answers right away. There is a lot of new information, and there will be a lot of changes in your child's life. It might take a few weeks before you get your head round things, but you will make progress. You'll gain some knowledge and understanding which will help you to cope with the changes and adjust.Press Releases Recent Press Releases Access Bank Plc, a licensed lender, pioneer in the informal commercial banking and non-banking financial services industry in Ghana, has been appointed by Accenture to partner with it to support the bank's commercial lending capabilities across the globe. The practice represents a key first step in Accenture's objective of becoming a leading enterprise at the heart of the digital transformation of global high-growth banking and it reflects the bank's strategic focus to deliver meaningful and sustainable value through digital innovation. We are living in an age where technology is almost penetrating every aspect of our lives, and hardly a day passes without news of a new technology breakthrough or an impending technology trend. In the same vein, banking and financial services have progressed tremendously to involve every facet of our lives. What were once thought to be limited in scope, such as insurance, has changed and extended its reach by joining hands with fields such as health, travel, education and transport. Accenture has just released the study - "The Innovation Imperative: FinTech's Position in the Enterprise". The research reveals that financial services is one of the most progressive industries in dealing with innovation. Taking time out for family and loved ones can be difficult if you work long hours and are located away from home. It can even become a nightmare
