What will you find in the mysterious landscape?The bodies of two women missing since Wednesday were found inside the smashed-up metal grid that was erected to prevent macaque attacks on tourists along the Li River in Sichuan's Wolong Nature Reserve, locals said. Ma Wenya, 20, and her sister, 18, Wang Baoqiao, were reported missing after they failed to return home from a hike in the reserve in north-western China on Wednesday. (Photo: Xiong Han) According to a source surnamed Lian, the couple had been to the nature reserve to photograph macaques. After returning home, they found the metal mesh - measuring 12 meters by 1.5 meters - around their home "and had not discovered it before they went on their hike," the source said. Police have launched an investigation to identify the deceased women. A plaque erected to warn tourists about monkey attacks in Wolong Nature Reserve. (Photo: CRI) The two women are believed to have been abducted by members of the People's Armed Police, a paramilitary force tasked with upholding the country's laws, the source added. The killing comes just months after a large number of wealthy tourists were kidnapped by a gang in Sichuan province in March. Those kidnapped were released unharmed following a payment of US$185,000. Nine people were initially arrested on suspicion of involvement in the abduction, and four of the accused were sentenced to four to nine years in prison.
