

HyperMotion allows players to complete enhanced controlled player movements such as fine-tuned 360-degree direction changes, precise dribbling, and top speed acceleration in the blink of an eye. During tactical play situations, this allows players to shift their body more agilely to respond quickly to a change of plans and reflect the high-speed nature of attacking and defensive play, while all movements within the virtual player are mirrored perfectly in motion in real-life. Herr Schmid's Thoughts On "HyperMotion" "We felt that FIFA was becoming too real", so when we were creating the "20 season" series of editions, we wanted to create a game that we would enjoy playing ourselves and was authentic when we played together. I think we succeeded well. And after all, FIFA is a game that is full of passion and fun. That is the goal. So we wanted to create a new dimension of the game. Now players can switch to the "HyperMotion" mode in-game and experience the increased responsiveness of controls in exacting detail. During actual training sessions with Cristiano Ronaldo, for example, I asked him to develop an attack with 'HyperMotion' mode active. But even with Cristiano involved, the level of detail regarding the visual and situational responsiveness of controls was still very impressive." "So, now we have four different scenarios with four distinct tactics that you can select in 'HyperMotion' mode. One is the 'Controls' mode, another is the 'Controls X-Factor' mode, and two more modes will be announced closer to launch." "But even with Cristiano involved, the level of detail regarding the visual and situational responsiveness of controls was still very impressive." "The first mode you can select in 'HyperMotion' mode is the 'Controls' mode, which stays true to the original game. This mode is for those players who like to play the game in the normal fashion and no one likes to change the game. It is also a good tool to compare the different versions of FIFA in motion." "The other three modes that we will announce in the future are 'Controls X-Factor', 'Controls' Ultimate', and 'Controls Special'." "In this mode, you can select the ones that you want to play
