Maybe we should call it "" after the front page of The New York Times. In an email dated February 3, 2006, Mathew Hickey of the TV news station WSB-TV in Atlanta, Georgia, said: People like CBS News better than CNN. Why? If you were asked to describe the difference between the two major American networks in the last 20 years, you would probably point to the competition in the time slot. CBS News does not have that problem. CBS News offers a tough, professional, grown-up approach to the news. While CNN is a tabloid — a loose collection of stories put together to catch attention, CBS News has a subtle style that builds up the news over weeks or months. ... It's as if CBS News plays to win, and if you don't watch, you won't know how well they're doing, because CBS News never gives their competition credit. Yeah, that's a lot like WTVP, the stadium station here in Sioux Falls. They've won a lot of awards. But when you're not watching, you never know how they're doing. When they finally did start their sports coverage, it was all about them, and they made sure you'd
