Some of the best financing in the industry can be found through loan products from Motorhome Manufacturers. You will pay interest on your motorhome and it will probably be larger than you can afford. However, if you choose to go with a budget motorhome, you can't escape the interest payments. RVing on a budget is possible if you buy a smaller motorhome. Most manufacturers have a line of budget motorhomes which were designed for those with smaller budgets and smaller needs. These motorhomes generally are smaller rigs which would have been considered to be "fullbacks" or "construction" back in the day. They are smaller than fullbacks, but bigger than campers and trailers. Some of the smaller motorhomes are actual trailers and are towed behind a car (or truck). Motorhomes that are towed behind a car are usually considered to be part of a full-time travel camp (FTTC). Budget motorhomes typically have a MSRP of just under $30,000. They usually have less than four feet of living space and can be towed by a car or small pickup truck. Being a new or relatively new RV enthusiast will make you ineligible to finance a bigger rig. There are no special exceptions or limits for new motorhome owners. On the other hand, if you have been traveling with your RV for some time or your RV has been parked at a campground a long time, you may be able to finance a larger motorhome than you would otherwise have been able to. If you are accustomed to riding a bicycle rather than driving a car, you may be used to riding a push bike, d0c515b9f4
