----- I think we all need to know more about gameplay bull and hell.

There are a few objects in this game that appear to have been corrupted by hell, including trees, boxes, the ground, and in the case of the ground, even the water. I noticed that the explosions from the crates that are spawned by hell do not seem to be related to a crate at all. Rather they seem to be destructible structures that are not supposed to be there. A case in point is when an early crate is spawned and appears to be jagged all the way across the play area. Yet when you fly into it, it feels as solid as any other crate. It seems to me that these are cases where a developer uses bugs in a game to make it look more realistic. Whatever is going on, they are making a heck of a pretty game with all of this visual fun. You should try it if you've got the time. The game can be played in its three story modes, Mission, Campaign, and Arcade. The Mission mode allows you to play one of two story missions, one set on a city area, one on the countryside. The Campaign mode allows you to play one of two single player modes, one for the Tankers, one for the Enthusiasts. The Arcade mode allows you to play some one of the sixteen arcade-style missions that have been designed. Again, there are two story missions and two single player modes, one for Tankers, one for Enthusiasts. (I found myself using the Expert mode for all of the missions). On the Difficulty front, you'll need to be at least good to become a Master with the most difficult mode, Expert. If you are not a very good pilot, then I would suggest Easy for all missions. If you just want to play mission types, try out the first story mission for a very good representation of gameplay. If you want to play the different story missions, try to beat the Combat and Time Challenges. The Combat challenges consist of three mission types: Laps, Combat, and a timed chase mode. The Laps challenge is for single player, as are the Combat and Time Challenges. In the Laps mode, you are given a mission to complete, the Combat Challenge gives you a mission to destroy a set of enemies, and the Time Challenge gives you a mission to destroy some enemies and reach some points within a time limit. The Time Challenge is a bit hard to play by itself, as you will be trying to destroy
