Human induced pluripotent stem cells offer an unlimited source of patient-specific human neurons for drug discovery. However, there are still major challenges in the generation of functional human neurons for applications, for example, in studying human disease mechanisms, such as Parkinson's disease, as well as in developing functional neuronal circuits for safety assessment in drug development. Here, we describe a protocol for differentiation of human induced pluripotent stem cells into dopamine (DA) neurons that carry multiple distinct markers of DA neurons, and the subsequent transcriptome analyses to establish a quantitative relationship between the generation of DA neurons in vitro and DA neurons in the brain. This protocol and all data are made available to the scientific community in a user-friendly manner through the Neuroscience Gateway.

As of the 2010 census it had a population of 5,810. Its motto is "The Birthplace of Watermelon." History Tranquil Hill is located on the historic Transylvania trail, a major trade route at the time that stretched from the Great Lakes to the Appalachians. The western border of Transylvania County, Kentucky was the Tennessee River. The Louisville and Nashville Railroad established a rail stop just west of the present-day community. The community took its name from the nearby "Tranquil Hill" abbey. The first railroad official to visit the community was John Hill, whose name was then adopted for the town.
