That description does a fair job, as well as. It also shows a full-price tag for the sports game out of the UK Amazon.com site, at £59.99, and at the for the U.S. site, which is $59.99 as well. Also listed is the collector's edition for the Xbox One, which for the first time in the series includes a third-party styled cover and manual. Players also get deluxe jerseys and a steelbook case with a preview of the game. Only the Xbox One edition is available at Amazon, at the time of writing. The third-party cover does have a strange pattern. It might be deliberate, but it almost looks like the pattern of a football, and also has many of the same colours as the emblems of Arsenal F.C. and Aston Villa F.C. Players also get deluxe jerseys and a steelbook case with a preview of the game. Those are available at Amazon.co.uk/uk or Amazon.com. The present invention relates to the recovery of reagents from various adsorbents used in a catalytic process. The catalytic processing of various hydrocarbonaceous streams can involve the use of a plurality of catalytic processes to convert the hydrocarbonaceous feed into useful products. For example, the catalytic treatment of petroleum residues, such as crude oils and various cuts from crude oils, produces a variety of products, including polymers and monomers used in the manufacture of useful articles such as fibers and resins.

Hydrocarbonaceous streams that are commonly processed in such processes include residual or waste oils, coker naphthas, shale oils, and oils derived from coal. A common petroleum residue, often referred to as atmospheric residuum (ATR), includes a diverse mixture of organic compounds, among which are polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (PAHs), alkylated polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons, and polynuclear aromatic compounds. PAHs, especially coal-tar PAHs, can be precursors to a number of carcinogens and mutagens, so reduction of PAHs in ATR is important from a public health standpoint.

For example, in the catalytic processing of a petroleum residue, the presence of polynuclear aromatic compounds, and particularly PAHs, must be reduced. Many methods are known for reducing the amount of PAHs in ATR. For example, U.S. Pat. No.
