Homework Topics Foldables are quickly gaining in popularity among children and have spawned millions of new products, including the soon-to-be blockbuster sleeper model books. However, the $4 billion market for these educational products—known as “fractal readers”—has been a bit slow to grow. According to the National Center for Education Statistics, only 21 million students used these foldable books in schools for the 2011-12 school year. This is a small number of students representing only about one out of every 20 students enrolled in school. In an effort to get more students using foldable books as an educational tool, the Department of Education has teamed up with a company that is believed to be one of the most innovative companies in the world today. The company’s name is Pop Learning and it is owned by two brothers, Tom and Matt Reedy. These two have a history of invention and creativity. Both Tom and Matt are products of West Virginia University where they developed and popularized the Fridge, a campus pet and friends that assisted in teaching lessons about life and persistence. Before they created Pop Learning, the brothers came up with a new name for the Fridge, the “Greatness Machine.” They were inspired to develop a device that would be a more comprehensive version of the Fridge. They purchased a printing press and started printing quirky books for a brief period of time. The brothers were impressed with the children they saw reading these books and they started 6d1f23a050
