I only have one LinearLayout with the content and I cannot find out where I am going wrong. I am trying to set the position of the tabs within the LinearLayout and I'm trying to do it from Java using setTouchOptions. When I apply the setTouchOptions (I have tried with and without the 'i' suffix in the method name) to the LinearLayout the tabs move, when I remove the setTouchOptions, the tabs don't move. I'm sure I'm missing something obvious. Any ideas? public class MainActivity extends TabActivity { TabHost tabHost; @Override public void onCreate(Bundle savedInstanceState) { super.onCreate(savedInstanceState); setContentView(R.layout.main); tabHost = getTabHost(); // Add three tabs tabHost.addTab(tabHost.new

This research is designed to be carried out in the appropriate areas of engineering and the research is carried out under the direction of a faculty member and supervised by a doctoral committee. Areas of current research at UTS as of fall 2011 are listed at www. upstate. edu/eng as follows: 1. Structural design and analysis. 2. Hydrodynamics and Heat transfer (new research initiatives are underway in both the 2- and 3-phase flow areas). 3. Power and combustion systems. 4. Computer and control systems. 5. Vehicle dynamics. 6. Production systems. 7. Materials and Material handling. 8. Aspects of manufacturing. 9. Analysis and design of moving machinery. 10. Energy systems. 11. Fluid systems. 12. Other miscellaneous activities. 13. Education and Training. 14. Research. The research is carried out within the following specializations: 1. Manufacturing engineering (Production design, Production control, Production planning, Management and administration). 2. Mechanical engineering (Power, Hydraulic, Heat transfer, Fluid dynamic and materials processing technologies). 3. Industrial engineering (including marketing, sales and management). 4. Technical engineering (including civil engineering and architectural). 5. Architecture and design. The doctoral program in this discipline offers the opportunity to develop a synthetic knowledge of the areas of human design and analysis in the design sciences. A broad specialist knowledge of those areas from which a particular design discipline can be derived. Research students are not required to have a degree in a specific discipline. However, the ability to draw on specialized scientific and technical knowledge of an appropriate discipline in the design process is desirable. The institution provides a compulsory undergraduate first degree which combines the study of the arts, social and natural sciences together with relevant foundational studies. Courses include arts, language, library, mathematics, science, social, computer science, quantitative and qualitative research methodology, in addition to foundational studies 6d1f23a050
