I'm trying to get an image I have to display in a background in the CSS, but even though it works in the local storage of the device, but when I refresh the page it goes all wierd. It crops the image of the background, the right and left side is overlapping. The image, if you want to see in action, is this one and my CSS is like this (It's pure CSS) #back { background-image: url(""); background-size: cover; } Any ideas? Thanks! A: Your image is 446 * 707 and your page is 446 * 740, and each component will need to be scaled by the same factor to maintain the aspect ratio and keep the image intact. Try this: #back { background-size: cover; background-repeat: no-repeat; background-position: center center; background-image: url(""); } Self- 6d1f23a050
