Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a semiconductor memory device and, more specifically, to a structure of an address decoder and a method of driving a word line and more generally to a semiconductor memory device having an adaptive power supply system. 2. Description of the Background Art A semiconductor memory device such as a DRAM (Dynamic Random Access Memory) as one of the dynamic memories has been developed to have a large capacity of memory cells. In the semiconductor memory device, information stored in a memory cell is read out by detecting the potential of a memory cell transistor formed in a memory cell matrix by a sense amplifier. Accordingly, it is required to set the potential of the memory cell transistor to a predetermined level. For this reason, generally, a power supply line connected to the gate of the memory cell transistor is driven to have the potential of a power supply potential Vcc to set the gate potential of the memory cell transistor. In the DRAM
