Patients with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) are often affected by memory deficit that is related to the high rate of dementia in ALS. To evaluate cognitive performance in ALS patients by means of a standardized neuropsychological examination. Seventeen ALS patients were enrolled in the study. Mini Mental State Examination and Frontal Assessment Battery were performed. Relations between cognitive testing results and clinical parameters such as ALSFRS-R and disease duration were studied. Impaired attention in 15 of 17 patients, impaired memory in 15 of 17 patients, impaired fluency in 16 of 17 patients, impaired abstraction in 14 of 17 patients, and pathological errors in 13 of 17 patients were observed. The correlation between cognitive results and ALSFRS-R and disease duration was not significant. Dementia/cognitive impairment occurred in 56% of ALS patients.Blood monoamines in rats with chronic nialamide administration. Blood monoamines were measured in rats treated chronically with nialamide, an inhibitor of MAO activity.
