QIARI I A YIL GELBEN YIL DE BENLĂ' If you have been searching for the latest news of the Tianjin municipal government's efforts to protect the environment, you will like the information and videos below. The project, which aims to promote civilised construction in Tianjin and protect the environment, was officially launched last Friday, at the Tianjin Stadium, by Tianjin Mayor Zeng Qinghong. Construction projects conducted in Tianjin during the past two years have reduced carbon emissions and energy consumption by 13.84 million tonnes and 45.75 million kilowatts, respectively, while they have created more than 1.5 million jobs. They have also returned 590 million yuan in income to the local economy, according to the municipal construction bureau. "During the past two years, there have been more than 140 major construction projects undertaken in Tianjin, of which about one hundred million tonnes of CO₂ has been saved, 300,000 tonnes of toxic chemicals has been reduced and about 40,000 kilowatts of electricity has been saved," said Zeng. "During the past two years, we have also saved 603 million yuan in income to the local economy, and our city now ranks first among the national green cities for the environment, second for tourism and third for urban vitality," the Mayor added. In order to protect the environment, Tianjin has demonstrated its willingness to prioritise ecological construction and integrate environmental protection into its projects, bringing about the concept of 'green, clean, smart, and beautiful'. The 'eco-friendly' capital has also been working on diversifying its energy sources and developing new clean energy sources, such as solar, wind and bioenergy, in order to meet the requirements of urbanisation. In 2012, environmental protection became one of the six priority areas of the municipal government, with the objective of increasing residents' awareness of environmental protection, establishing better management mechanisms, and creating a complete ecology system and a rational ecosystem. "After two years of efforts by various departments, the municipal government has set up a number of departments in this area, including Ecology, Geology, Hydro, Water, Air, Pollution, and Demography," said

Zhang Lei, deputy director of the Municipal Construction Bureau. Besides, the Municipal Construction Bureau has organised conferences, lectures and other events to raise the understanding of residents about environmental protection, in order to improve the ecological environment of Tian
